Positions

Actuarial Science - Lecturer / Senior Lecturer

Overview

Applications are invited for the above full-time position. The position requires a candidate with strong communication skills, and preference will be given to candidates with an interest in or track record in research in the actuarial field. The School offers undergraduate & postgraduate degrees in Actuarial Science and Mathematical Statistics, and exemptions are offered from the examinations of the Actuarial Society of South Africa for all of the A100, A200, A300 and F100 subjects. To date, over 780 former students have qualified as Fellow Actuaries.

Minimum Qualifications & Experience

Lecturer

Fellow of the Actuarial Society of South Africa (FASSA), plus an Honours' degree (or equivalent 4-year degree) and work experience at an appropriate level of relevant actuarial practice, preferably in life, finance or general insurance. A Masters or PhD, as well as prior lecturing and supervision experience will be considered an advantage.

Senior Lecturer

As for lecturer, but in addition with at least 10 years' post-qualification relevant actuarial practice.

Duties

Teaching, examining, course development and research, supervision of students for Honours' projects, publishing research, and assisting in the management of the actuarial programme. The candidate would also be expected to participate in the activities of the Actuarial Society of South Africa. Senior Lecturers will also be expected to supervise Masters' research reports and dissertations.

Remuneration

A market related remuneration package which includes a retirement fund, medical aid, leave and study benefits, subject to the University's rules and regulations.
